STARTS AT

The Vollis Simpson whirligig park is a one-of-a-kind destination featuring 30 monumental, wind-powered kinetic sculptures created by visionary folk artist Vollis Simpson. Standing as tall as 50 feet, these towering whirligigs were crafted from recycled industrial materials, including old road signs, bicycle parts, HVAC fans, milkshake mixers, and salvaged machinery. Officially designated as North Carolina's state folk art, the sculptures transform everyday scrap into mesmerizing works of art that spin, shimmer, and come alive with the wind.
